Random question to ask a girl

My experience asking questions in relationships (of any kind)...

Before digging in... I’ve had a lot of experiences asking questions to build relationships. Whether it’s with family, friends, a guy/girl, or a coworker. Here are my top tips for asking questions of ANY kind.

- Remember a few that you like – Keep a couple of great questions in your back pocket. My favorite, “Where’s somewhere you want to go this weekend?”

- Don't forget these as a tool - Whenever there's a dull moment, whether you're with a spouse or family... pull out a few of these questions.
- Don't take it too seriously - Especially when it comes to spouses. This isn't a time to start digging! Have fun, make it silly, and don't take it all too seriously.

Conclusion

That sums things up! Don't be shy to ask a question to someone that you don't know. Sometimes, that another person is looking for someone else to make a connection with them. You might be surprised. The worst thing that could happen is someone gives you a bad look and then turns the other way. It's okay! It takes a little courage to put yourself out there. Although, the more that you do, the easier it becomes.
